There were no seats for the women.

"Baldy" Taylor, a negro who enjoys a reputation among his race as a desperate and dangerous man, volunteered to find seats for the women "Follow me," he said, "I'll git seats for you,"

Taylor then led the way into the coach reserved for white people.

"Here's enough seats for us all, said the negro insolently.

The women proceeded to occupy seats in the white coach. Opposite them were H. G. Fisher, E. R. Hume and E. W. Schulte.

'Are you not in the wrong pew? inquired Fisher of the negro.

The ire of the desperate negro was

"White man, don't you bother me," responded Taylor threateningly, half rising from his seat. Suddenly he flashed a Colt revolver of 44 caliber and shot Fisher.

Taylor then turned his weapon upon E. R. Hume. The latter by this time had his own weapon out and two shots rang cut simultaneously. Hume sank to the floor of the car mortally wounded. His bullet hit and slightly wounded Taylor, who then shot E. W.

Taylor will be lynched.

It seems mest had gone up half a cent a pound, and the dispatch was from the company notifying him so he could govern himself accordingly.

The company transmits all such orders in cipher, and to the uninitiated SYKACUSE SELECTED AS THEIR held few meetings. Chairman Simpone of those cipher messages is about the most unintelligible things imaginable. They are made up of the most outlandish words and syllables that can be coupled together, and unfortunately the new man had never seen one before.

He read it and re-read it, but he couldn't get any sense out of it. Finally he decided he would get a dictionary and see if it wouldn't shed some light on the mystery. He called at several places, but couldn't find a single dictionary among his friends, J. Gainor, Muncie, Ind.; M. A. Fitzso he went to the newsdealers and gerald, New York; Edward Turner, bought one. The only word in his telegram that he could find in the dictionary meant "to use insulting, abusive language," and although he couln't make out what the remainder meant, he came to the conclusion that he had offended the house, and was going to get fired.

Hurriedly sending in a dispatch to hold up judgment until he could explain, he took the first train to Paducah, and when he got here and reported at the local headquarters, was explained the merits of the secret cipher, and provided with a code book, with which the company had previously neglected to provide him. He's all right now, but his friends have a great deal of fun out of him over the joke.

JAVANESE METHOD OF OF INDUCING SLEEP.

Dr. Steiner observed in Java s method employed to induce sleep. In consists in compressing the carotid arteries. The operator sits on the ground behind the patient whose neck he seizes with both hands. The index and middle fingers are then push ed forward into the carotids which are compressed toward the spine. The patient's respiration becomes more rapid and more profound and his head relaxes backward. The method is absolutely harmless, anaestaesia is rapidly obtained and the patient wakes promptly with no symptoms of nausea or malaise. Dr. Steiner declares the method to be well known in Java, where it is used to relieve headache, sleeplessness, etc., and points out the fact that the carotid artery was known to the ancients as arteria soporifera, and that its name in modern Russian is "artery of sleep." He does not seem to know that the method is widely practiced in India. Kipling's Kim, for example, is put to sleep by a process of the sort. Dr. Steiner experimented upon thirty Japanese and was successful in all but five cases. He sat in front of the patient placing his right hand on the left, his left hand on the right side of the patient's neck. IS A HOLY WAR POSSIBLE?

Continental and English newspapers have been much exercised of late over tne very evident desire of Italy to acquire a footing on the southern shore of the Mediterranean by seizing Trip-4.2 on the gauge, a rise of 0.3 in last oli. The general opinion is that the result of such an aggression would be the re-opening of the entire Eastern question, but in some quarters there exists a curious and, perhaps, not altogether unjustified apprehension that the Italian policy would produce in Africa and elsewhere a holy war worse by far than that which in the eighties swept the Soudanese provinces temporarily out of touch with civilization. It is a mistake to believe that Islamism is hopelessly impotent as a factor in world politics. In Africa, especially in the Mediterranean lands, it is particularly strong, and is growing stronger daily as the ranks of the faithful increase numerically. Various centers of Mussulmen organization are always active in Northern Africa, their object being to encourage the natives in the practice of warlike exercises and to prepare them for a conflict with the forces of Christendom. Of course, the idea of a general hoiy war is in a great measure a figment of Mahometan fanaticism and of European imagination, but the existence of a belief in its probability, or rather its inevitability, indicates a condition of unrest which the powers of Europe, outside of Italy, are apparently unwilling to aggravate. Ever since her disastrous Abyssinian expedition Italy has been endeavoring to redeem her lost military prestige. Many of her politicians and most of her newspapers have found the opportunity in the differences which seem to them to afford warrant for the occupation of Tripolitan territory by Italian troops and the blockade of Tripolitan ports by Italian ships. They are deluding themselves with the idea that the native population of Tripoli would welcome any foreign interference which promises them a release from the burdens of Turkish rule, but they forget that to the Tripolitan the voke of an unbeliever would be a The Maude Kilgore arrived this thousand times more hateful than the domination of the Turk. CRUSADE AGAINST FIGHT.

LOUISVILLE MINISTERS TO DRAFT AN APPEAL TO GOV. BECKHAM.

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 8-All the Louisville ministers notified their congregations yesterday that a mass meeting would be held this week to take action looking to the prevention of the fight between McGovern and Young Corbett, scheduled for September 22. At this meeting a petition will be drawn up for presentation to Gov. Beckham asking him to stop the fight. The date of the meeting will be decided tomorrow, when the ministers meet in response to a call sent out by the Y. M. C. A. of Louisville.

Told of President McKinley Dr. P. M. Rixey recalls that when the president's mother sat down for the first time to a White House dinner, what seemed to impress her most was the prodigal supply of cream, and she commented on its abundance, and then added: "Well, William, at last I know what they mean when they speak of the cream of society."

The president laughed. "I admit, said he, "that there seems to be an ex travagant array of cream on the tabl but you know, mother, we can affor to keep a cow, now.

Dust-Borne Disease.

In the discussion at the recent con-gress of surgeons in Berlin on the first aid to the wounded on the battlefield it was brought out by Burns, Bartelsmann and others that the danger in modern warfare is not so much from primary infection by the small-caliber projectile of rapid-fire rifles as from secondary infection by con-tamination of the wound from the clothing or the dust of the battle-field. The effort of the field surgeon is therefore more to exclude septic and tetanus germs than to disinfect the wound. But to come nearer home the danger of dust is emphasized by the report that New York City has over 450 street sweepers on the sick list with diseases due to the inhalation of infectuous dust. A number of affections are so commonly conveyed in dust as to merit the designation in dust as to merit of "dust diseases." Of these cerebrospinal meningitis is of frequent oc-currence in cities during the spring months .-- American Medicine.

MANY VACCINATED.

DOCTORS BUSY GETTING CHILD-REN READY FOR SCHOOL.

A number of the local physicians are busy today vaccinating the school pupils and perhaps the busiest one of them all is Dr. J. S. Troutman, of Mechanicsburg, who is in a territory where little vaccination, comparatively, has been done.

This year all the pupils, pursuant to an order of the board made since the closing of the summer session, have to carry a good, strong marked vaccination scar before they will be taken into the schools and many have not been vaccinated at all and have to have the operation performed before they are permitted to enter. A great deal of time was heretofore consumed Misa Bertie Leonard and Mrs. Curd right in the most interesting portion of the school term and right where an interruption is most strongly felt, by the smallpox scare which of course necessitated the vaccination of many pupils all of whom had to be examined by the teachers and this, of course, took time and interfered with the school work. All the doctors have done more or less vaccination today and the school teachers and officers are hurrying the matter in order to suffer as little delay as possible.

bains forby, the children and the hope of Appin, that must be learned their letters and how to hold a sword in that far country. Now the tenants of Appin have to pay a rent to King George, but their hearts are stanch; they are true to their chief, and what with love and a bit of pressure and may be a threat or two the poor folks scrape up a second rent for Ardshiel. Well, David, I'm the hand that carries it." And he struck the belt about his body so that the "Do they pay both?" cried I.

"Aye, David, both," says he.

"What! two rents?" I repeated.

"Aye, David," said he. "I told a dif-

all his life so great a man, and come of the blood and bearing the name of kings, is now brought down to live in a French town like a poor and private person. He that had four hundred swords at his whistle I have seen with these eyes of mine buying butter in the market place and taking it home in a kale leaf. This is not only a pain, but a disgrace to us of his family and clan. There are the

"Aye, David," said he. "I told a dif-ferent tale to yon captain man, but this is the truth of it. And it's wonderful to me how little pressure is needed. But that's the handiwork of my good kins-man and my father's friend, James of the Glens—James Stewart that is—Ard-shiel's half brother. He it is that gets the money in and does the management."
This was the first time that I heard the name of that James Stewart, who was afterwards so famous at the time of his hanging. But I took little heed at the moment, for all my mind was occupied with the generosity of these poor highlanders.

"I call it noble," I cried. "I'm a Whig, or little better, but I call it noble."

"Aye," said he, "ye're a Whig, but ye're a gentleman, and that's what does it. Now if ye were one of the cursed race of Campbell ye would gnash your teeth, to hear tell of it. If ye were the Red Fox"— And at that name his teetn shut together, and he ceased speaking I have seen many a grim face, but never a grimmer than Alan's when he had named the Red Fox. the Red Fox.

"And who is the Red Fox?" I asked.

daunted, but still curious.
"Who is he?" cried Alan. "Well, and I'll tell you that. When the men of the clans were broken at Culloden and the good cause went down, and the horses rode over the fetlocks in the best blood of the north, Ardshiel had to flee like poor deer upon the mountain—he ard his lady and his bairns. A sair job we had of it before we got him shipped; and while he still lay in the heather the English rogues that could nae come at his life were striking at his rights. They stripped him of his powers; they stripped him of his lands; they plucked the weap-ons from the hands of his clansmen that had borne arms for thirty centuries: aye, and the very clothes off their backs so that it's now a sin to wear a tartan —so that it's now a sin to wear a tartan plaid, and a man may be cast into a jeil if he has but a kilt about his legs. One thing they could nae kill. That was the leve the clansmen bore their chief. These guineas are the proof of it. And now in there steps a man, a Campbell, redheaded Colin of Glenure"—

"Is the kinn you call the Ped Free?"

said I.

*Will ye bring me his brush?" cried Alan fiercely. "Ah, that's the man. In he steps and gets papers from King George, to be so called king's factor on the lands of Appin. And at first he sings small, and is hail fellow well met with Sheamus—that's James of the with Sheamus—that's James of the Glens, my chieftain's agent. But by and by, that come to his ears that I have just told you; how the poor com-mons of Appin, the farmers and the crofters and the boumen were wringing their very plaids to get a second rent and sent it over seas for Ardshiel and his poor barns. What was it ye call it, when I told ye?"

"Is that him you call the Red Fox?".

"I called it noble, Alan," said I.

"And you little better than a common Whig!" cries Alan. "But when it came to Colin Roy, the black Campbell blood in him ran wild. He sat gnashing his teeth at the wine table. What! should a Stewart get a bite of bread, and him not be able to prevent it? Ah! Red Fc if ever I hold you at a gun's end, the Lord have pity upon ye!" Alan stopped to swallow down his anger. "Weli, David, what does he do? He declares all the farms to let. And thinks he, in his black heart, 'I'll soon get other tenants that'll overbid these Stewarts and Maccolls and Marcobs (for these are all names in my clan, David), 'and then,' "I called it noble, Alan," said I. names in my clan, David), 'and then,' thinks he, 'Ardshiel will have to hold his bonnet on a French roadside!'"

"Aye, but Ardshiel is the captain of the clan," said he, which scarcely cleared my mind. ""Ye see, David, he that was 'Well," said I, "what followed?" Alan laid down his pipe, which he had ong since suffered to go out, and set his two hands upon his knees

"Aye," said he, "ye'll never guess that! For these same Stewarts, and Maccolls, and Macrobs (that had two Maccolls, and Macrobs (that had two rents to pay, one to King George by stark force and one to Ardshiel by nat-ural kindres), offered him a better price than _ny Campbell -in all broad Scotland; and far he sent seeking them —as far as to the sides of the Clyde and the cross_of Edinburgh—seeking, and decching and beging them. fleeching, and begging them to come, where there was a Stewart to be starved and a redheaded hound of a Campbell to be pleasured!"

"Well, Alan," said I, "that is a strange story, and a fine one too. And Whig as I may be, I am glad the man was

"Him beaten?" echoed Alan. "It's little ye ken of Campbells and less of Red Fox. Him beaten? No; nor will be till his blood's on the hillside! But if the day comes, David, man, that I can find time and leisure for a bit of hunting there grows not enough heather in all Scotland to hide him from my venge-

'Man, Alan," said I, "ye are neither very wise nor very Christian to blow off so many words of anger. They will do the man ye call the Fox no harm, and yourself no good. Tell me your tale plainly out. What did he next?" "And that's a good observe, David," said Alan. "Troth and indeed they will do him no harm, the more's the pity And barring that about Christianity (of which my opinion is quite otherwise, or I would be nae Christian), I am much of your mind.

'Opinion here or opinion there," said a kent thing that Christianity

"Ah," said he, "it's well seen it was a Campbell taught ye! It would be a con-venient world for them and their sort if there was no such a thing as a lad and a gun behind a heather bush! But that's nothing to the point. That is what he did.

"Aye," said I, "come to that."
"Well, David," said he, "since he could nae be rid of the royal commons by fair means, he swore he would be rid of them by foul. Ardshiel was to starve; that was the thing he aimed at. And since them that fed him in his exile would not be bought out right or wrong, he would drive them out. Therefore he sent for lawyers and papers and red-coats to stand at his back. And the kindly folk of that country must all pack and tramp, every father's son out of his father's house, and out of the place where he was bred and fed, and played when he was a callant. And who are to succeed them? Bareleggi his rents; he maun dow with less; he can spread his butter thinner; what cares Red Colin? If he can hurt Ard-shiel he has his wish; if he can pluck the meat from my chieftain's table, and the meat from my chieftain's table, and the bit toys out of his children's hands, he will gang hame singing to Glenure!"

"Let me have a word," said I. "Be sure, if they take less rents, be sure government has a finger in the pie. It's not this Campbell's fault, man—it's his orders. And if ye killed this Colin tomorrow, what better would ye be? There would be another factor in his shoes as fast as spur can drive."

shoes as fast as spur can drive."
"Ye're a good lad in a fight," said
Alan, "but, man, ye have Whig blood in ye!"
And with this Alan fell into a mu and for a long time sat very sad and si

> CHAPTER XIII. THE LOSS OF THE BRIG.

It was the spare ward I had got hold of It was already late at night, and as dark as it ever would be at that season of the year (and that is to say it was still pretty bright), when Hoseason clapped his head into the roundhouse

"Here," said he, "come out and see if

"Is this one of your tricks?" asked

"Do I look like tricks?" cries the cap tain. "I have other things to think of-my brig's in danger?"

By the concerned look of his face, by the concerned look of his lace, and above all by the sharp tones in which he spoke of his brig, it was plain to both of us he was in deadly earnest, and so Alan and I, with no great fear of treachery, stepped on deck.

The sky was clear; it blew hard and was bitter cold; a great deal of daylight lingered, and the moon, which was near liugered, and the moon, which was nearly full, shone brightly.

Altogether it was no such ill night to keep the seas in, and I had begun to wonder what it was that sat so heavily upon the captain, when, the brig rising suddenly on the top of a high swell, he pointed and cried to us to look. Away on the lee how a thing like a fountain on the lee bow a thing like a fountair rose out of the moonlit sea, and imme diately after we heard a low sound of

"What do ye call that!" asked the captain gloomily.

"The sea breaking on a reef," said Alan. "And now ye ken where it is. and what better would ye have?" "Aye," said Hoseason, "if it was the only one."

And sure enough just as he spoke there came a second fountain farther to the south.

the south.

"There!" said Hoseason. "Ye see for yourself. If I had kent of these reefs, if I had had a chart, or if Shuan had been spared, it's not sixty guineas—no, nof six hundred, would have made me risk my brig in sic a stoneyard! But you, sir, that was to pilot us, have ye never a word?"

"I'm thinking" said Alan "these'll.

"I'm thinking," said Alan, "these'll be what they call the Torran rocks."
"Are there many of them?" says the

"Truly, sir, I am nae pilot," said Alan, "but it sticks in my mind there are ten miles of them.' Mr. Riach and the captain looked at

Mr. Riach and the captain looked at each other.
"There's a way through them, I suppose?" said the captain.
"Doubtless," said Alan; "but where? But it somehow runs in my mind once more that it is clearer under the land."
"So?" said Hoseason. "We'll have to haul our wind then, Mr. Riach; we'll nave to come as near in about the end of Mull as we can take her, sir, and even then we'll have the land to keep the wind off us and that stone yard on our lee. Well, we're in for it now and may as well crack on."

well, were in for it now and may as well crack on."

With that he gave an order to the steersman and sent Riach to the foretop. There were only five men on deck, counting the officers. These were all that were fit, or at least both fit and willing for their weak and two fitness. willing, for their work, and two of these were hurt. So, as I say, it fell to Mr. Riach to go aloft, and he sat there looking out and hailing the deck with news of all he saw.

"The sea to the south is thick," he cried, and then after awhile, "it does seem clearer in by the land." "Well, sir," said Hoseason to Alan.

"Well, sir," said Hoseason to Alan.
"we'll try your way of it. But I think
I might as well trust to a blind fiddler.
Pray God you're right."
"Pray God I am!" says Alan to me.
"But where did I hear it? Well, well, it will be as it must."
As we got nearer to the turn of the land the reefs began to be sown here and there on our very path, and Mr.
Riach sometimes cried down to us to change the course. Sometimes indeed change the course. Sometimes indee none too soon, for one reef was so close on the brig's weatherboard that whe a sea burst upon it the lighter spray

The brightness of the night showed us these perils as clearly as by day which was perhaps the more alarming. It showed me, too, the face of the captain as he stood by the steersman, now on one foot, now on the other, and some times blowing in his hands, but still listening and looking and as steady as steel. Neither he nor Mr. Riach had shown well in the fighting, but I saw they were brave in their own trade, and admired them all the near hearner. admired them all the more because I found Alan very white.

"Ochone, David," said he, "this is no
the kind of death I fancy."

"What, Alan!" I cried, "you're not afraid?"

"No," said he, wetting his lips,

you'll allow yourself, it's a cold ending. By this time, now and then sheering to one side or the other to avoid a reef but still hugging the wind and the land, we had got around iona and begun to come alongside Mull. The tide of the tail of the land ran very strong and threw the brig about. Two hands were put to the helm, and Hoseason himself would sometimes lend a help; and it would sometimes lend a help, and it was strange to see three strong men throw their weight upon the tiller, and it, like a living thing, struggle against and drive them back. This would have been the greater danger had not the sea been for some while free of obstacles. Mr. Riach besides announced from the tor that he saw clear water. from the top that he saw clear water ahead.

"Ye were right," said Hoseason to Alan. "Ye have saved the brig, sir; I'll mind that when we come to clear accounts." And I believe he not only meant what he said, but would have done it; so high a place did the Covenant hold in his affections.

GOES ON THE ROAD

Mr. H. J. Foppe Signs With the Down in Hopkins Company.

Where Some of the Show People Known in Paducah Are This Season.

THEATRICAL NEWS IN GENERAL

Mr. H. J. Foppe, for several years past with the Rhodes-Burford Furniture company, has signed with the 'Down in Hopkins' company, and leaves Paducah September 22 for a tour of the circuit the company will play. The play was written by a Louisville newspaper man, and is bas ed on the mining troubles in Hopkins county. The most prominent character will be the organizer, which part will be taken by Mr. James Wood, the well known union man, of Central City. The company will rehearse for a week before taking the road. Mr. Foppe will play the part of a mine owner, and will be stage manager. The company will play Paducah late in the season

The company is to be a strong one, and the play is said to be one of the best depicting Kentucky life. In selecting Mr. Foppe the management has done well. He is an old hand, and was on the road for several years before he came to Paducah several years ago and managed Ramona park theater before it burned.
